

Alexandra Aragão is Professor with a permanent post at the Faculty of Law of the University of Coimbra, Portugal, where she teaches environmental law, ecoliteracy, risk governance, food safety law and forest law. She is vice-editor of the Portuguese "Planning law, urban law and environmental law journal". She is member of the European Natura 2000 observatory, of the European water observatory, of the Advisory Board of the European Environmental Law Forum and trustee of the European group of environmental law experts, Avosetta.org.. She is a member of the Committee on Conflicts of Interest of the Intergovernmental Panel on Biodiversity and Ecosystem Services. She coordinates the interdisciplinary network "JUST-Side - Territorial Justice and Sustainability through spatial data infrastructures" (in ten Iberian and Latin American countries) and is in charge of the Responsible Innovation research line at the Normandie Chair for Peace, at Caen University.

Her areas of publication are environmental law, nature conservation law, animal law, waste law, risk law, food safety law, human environmental rights, environmental impact assessment and strategic assessment, environmental permits, ecological labels, environmental popular action, ecosystem services law, river basin law, geoethics and eco-innovation law.